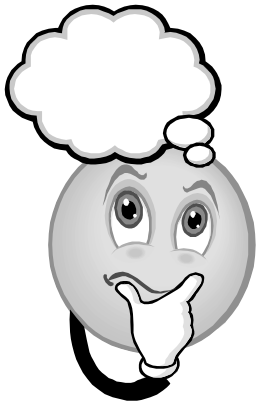
BRAINSTORMING BY LISTING & ORDERED GROUPING



This prewriting method is useful when you are beginning to think about a topic that involves some sort of ordered process. As with other brainstorming techniques, begin by listing important words and phrases that come to mind over to the left, although not necessarily in any particular order. Next, transfer the words and phrases to the graphic organizer on the right, placing them in the appropriate relationship to one another in groups of chronological order and/or relationship (first, second, third, etc). Feel free to add more words or phrases in the arrows and to the groupings to the right.
